

Diversity, Equality, and Inclusion Statement

Every child deserves to feel safe, seen, and celebrated with a space to play exactly as they are.

My practice is built on the conviction that all children and families, regardless of background, identity, or circumstance, deserve access to compassionate, high-quality therapeutic support. I am committed to providing a space that is genuinely welcoming, non-judgemental, and attuned to the unique world of every child I work with.

I recognise that children arrive in the therapy room carrying the weight of their lived experience — shaped by culture, family, community, and the particular ways the world has met them. I hold this with care. My practice is anti-discriminatory in its foundations, and I actively work to ensure that no child or family feels othered, unseen, or unwelcome with me.

Diversity

I honour the richness of every child's cultural, familial, and personal identity.

Equality

Every child receives the same depth of care, attention, and therapeutic commitment.

Inclusion

The play space is adapted to be accessible and affirming for every child and family.

I welcome children and families of all ethnicities, cultures, religions, and beliefs; all genders and gender expressions; all sexual orientations and family structures; all abilities and neurodivergent profiles; and all socioeconomic backgrounds. I am committed to ongoing learning and reflection, recognising that being truly inclusive is a practice, not a fixed state of arrival.

If you have any questions about accessibility, or if there is anything I can do to make my space more welcoming for your child and family, I warmly encourage you to reach out.

Play is a child's language, and every child's voice matters here.
